The course content will be delivered synchronously through Canvas. Sections 2 - 4 belong to this lecture. Students will be automatically registered for this lecture when registering for the pertinent IVC discussion section. Supplemental Instruction (SI) is attached to this section. SI provides free, organized group study sessions in which students actively focus on course content, test preparation, and study skills. SI is facilitated by trained student SI leaders. SI session times are determined the first week of class. See https://learningcenter.utah.edu/supplemental/index.php for more information. Learning Assistants (LAs) are attached to this section. LAs are undergraduates who are familiar with course content and trained in small group facilitation. This course includes opportunities for in-class collaborative, active learning, during which students discuss ideas and problem-solve together.

With over 15 million daily active users, video game streaming has a massive impact on communities and the future of the video game industry, yet very few people understand what it is. This course is intended to be a broad survey of video game streaming from analytical critique of the format plus its uses and broad impact, to the practical methods of production, marketing and building an audience. Students will be assessed through written assignments as well as video recordings of individually produced streams. Students will gain a working knowledge of the practical implementation of what it takes to create a live stream beginning with pre-production, production, and post-production.
15654	EAE	4900-003	Game Career Fundamentals	TPC	3.0	T	06:00 PM - 09:00 PM		CANVAS	HUNTER, A.
This course introduces students to the key fundamentals of the video game industry, including how game studios are structured and how they operate, the differences between a career at a AAA studio compared to an indie studio, and what is expected of creative employees on a day-to-day basis. This course helps prepare students with a number of necessary skills to start their career, such as resume &amp; portfolio crafting and professional communication skills; it also outlines the skills necessary for students to flourish in the game industry, including the hows and whys of networking, successfully presenting and pitching ideas, and how to continually grow and perfect their craft.

In order to design a game with a specific aesthetic, a game designer must understand the way the gamer's mind works. Only then can the designer hope to elicit a player's interpretation of the game such that the player experiences the desired aesthetic the designer created the game for. This course is an in-depth look at cognitive principles, such as perception, attention, and motivation, and how we, as game designers, can apply these principles to create the engaging games we intend. For additional information, please visit http://uonline.utah.edu or call (801) 585-5959. This hands-on writing class will focus on issues of race and ethnicity in creative writing. Students will read and discuss a range of ethnic American creative texts such as plays, poems, short stories, personal narratives and performance art, examining how racial and ethnic identities are constructed and expressed in diverse contexts. Of primary importance to this course, students will write their own creative texts and share their work for peer discussion. A special theme of urban and natural landscapes will be supported by guest artist engagement with the indigenous theatre collective, All My Relations.
